

On the Edge of What One Knows The critical junctures of being on the edge. where a pause is a motionless moment where time stops moving. We look back, we look forward, we step off. I am depicting an upwardly moving timeline of these edges where we engage in an inquiry into our actions and motivations. The space in between, equally as important, is where we live.

It is a contemplation of the movement of time through our lives with the steps of discovery that signify what we learn.